Many people describe college as the best years of their life. In the future we will look back and long for things to be simple again.

Simply Trojans describes life here at Troy State, where students strive to obtain knowledge, anticipate the future, and achieve their dreams.

In the ancient city of Troy there stood a wooden statue of the goddess of wisdom, Athena, which was known as the Palladium. This statue was believed to have fallen from heaven. As long as the Palladium remained the city would not fall. It served as protection for the people of Troy, and as a lucky charm.

CAMPUS
LIFE

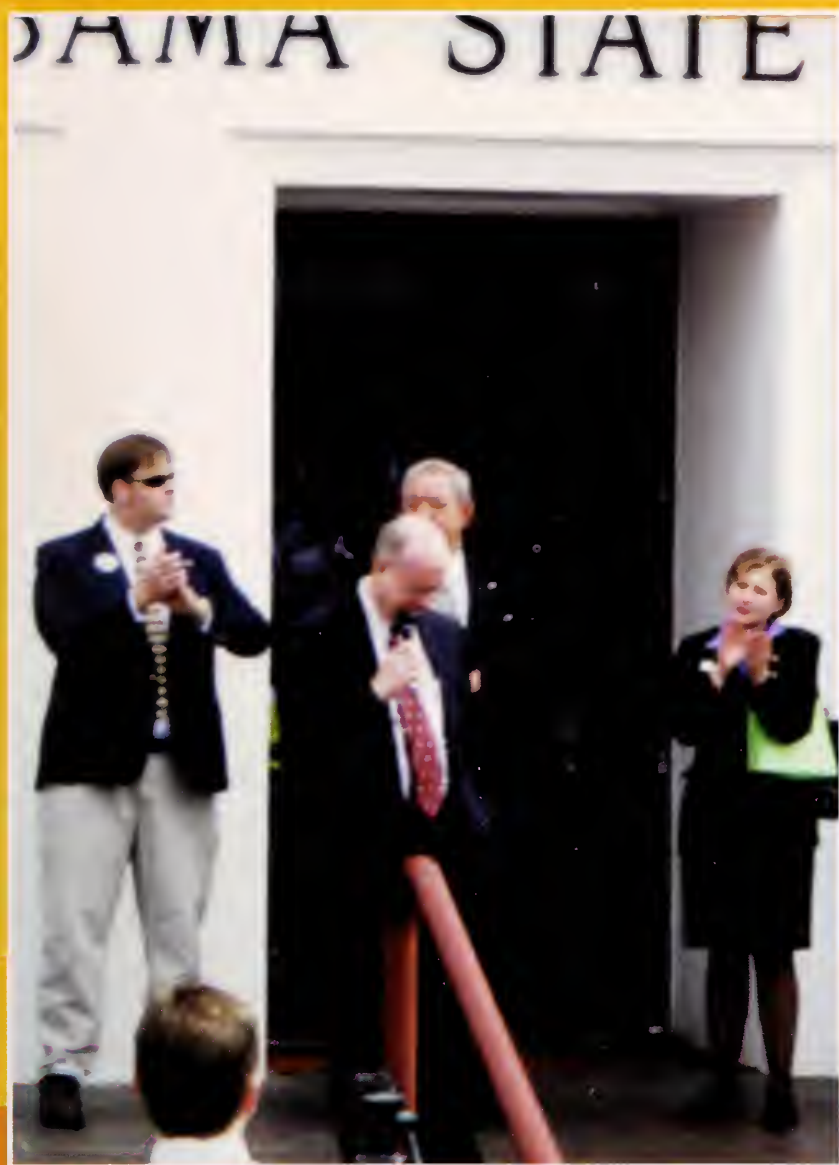

FIRED UP ABOUT PRORATION

"6.2 percent across the board!" Chancellor Hawkins exclaimed at the proration rally held on the state capitol's front steps. The fate of higher education was at risk, and the students of Troy State made their voices heard.

All student government senators were allowed to go into the Alabama State House and take two students in with them. The groups were then broken up into eight to 10 people and assigned senators to go visit. Unfortunately, this took place at around lunch time and many of the senators were out of their office. A few groups were able to talk to some of the remaining senators and discussed their viewpoint on proration. Freshman Amber Fowler stated, "I think we made a difference by just being there and letting the government of Alabama know that we do care about our future."

To express their feelings, students hold up many creative signs to let the government of Alabama know just how they feel.

WE WILL NOT BACK DOWN

College students and faculty members from all over the state of Alabama met on the State House steps in March. A reported 2,000 people turned out to show their support for higher education. All Troy State students were excused from class if they went out to the rally. An added bonus was a free lunch offered to everyone who attended. The purpose of the rally was to demonstrate in the capitol just how important Higher Education really is. We do not deserve to take on the whole burden of proration. Repeatedly the chant of "What do we want? Equal cuts! When do we want it? Now!" echoed through the crowd. The possibility of a 40% increase in tuition is devastating to many college students and compelled them to make a stand for what they believe in.

The Troy State cheerleaders show school spirit at the higher education rally by leading various cheers and chants.

A protester of proration in Alabama holds up a sign that reads, "Keep this up and Alabama's chief export will be college-age students."

Troy State students become united with every college in Alabama for the common cause to have equal cuts across the board.

WE CAN MAKE a Difference

On Nov. 16, 2000, the students of Troy State let their voices be heard when they attended the Alabama Constitution Changes Rally. The rally was a part of the Leadership Program and was funded by a grant. Leigh Quinney, Tanesha Louis, and Amy Phillips-Redcliff wrote the proposal for the rally because they believed there was a need to inform students that the Alabama Constitution was the foundation of problems in our state. A large number of people came out to support changing the constitution; over 350 students signed the petition to amend the Alabama Constitution. One creative way of bringing more students out to the rally was by offering a free sack lunch in exchange for their signature on the petition.

Amy Phillips-Redcliff stated, "I think we accomplished what we set out for, and that was to get students motivated towards making a change."

Leigh Quinney, left, informs a student why it is important to sign the petition for the much needed changes to the Alabama Constitution.

Troy State students sign the petition in favor of changing outdated laws in the Alabama Constitution.

Our Right to Vote

As proration was being declared, Troy State students realized their right to vote. Many of these students exercised that right by voting in the Student Government elections. With higher education on the minds of many students and the platform for many candidates, the election race became a close one. Meryl Jones, Katy Peel and Bart Boothe ran for SGA president. The number of votes for Jones and Peel were so close that a runoff election had to be scheduled. After the votes from the runoff election were counted, Jones was the new SGA president.

The office of president was not the only position that was open. Jonathan McKenzie and Tracey Cobb both ran for vice president of legislative affairs, and McKenzie won.

There were other people running for election, but they were unopposed. Hilary West became the SGA clerk. The secretary position was taken by Jessica Lewis. Ryan Huckaby was elected as the vice president of campus activities.

Although voter turnout numbers were low, this election race was one of the best run at Troy State.

People like Rod Davenport exercise their right to vote as a TSU student by voting during SGA elections.

Brooke Slayton, Heather Hines, and Hope Fussell sit at a table to encourage students to vote and to help students with the voting process.

Food for Thought

As school started, Troy State students noticed many changes that took place over the summer. The most dramatic change was the new look of Stewart Dining Hall, or Saga. Construction on the cafeteria began in May 2000 and finished in late August, just in time for classes. "We have wanted to change it for a very long time," said Frank Bowen, manager of Saga.

The dining hall underwent some major changes. It was rearranged to make room for tables, chairs, and a place for students to enjoy international cuisine was also added. The Grill was changed to Frank's Place. Frank's Place has a sports bar atmosphere with pool tables, a jukebox, video games, and sports memorabilia.

Overall, the new look of Saga received good comments, especially about the international cuisine.

Throughout the week the Stewart Dining Hall staff provides a wide variety of food to choose from for the students.

GONE

COUNTRY

Rising country music star Andy Griggs and his band, Ward 8, performed at Troy State on Oct. 18, 2000. Andy Griggs is not a "no-name" country music singer. He was recognized by the "Radio and Records and Airplay Monitor" as the Best New Male Country Artist of 1999. Among some of the songs Griggs and his band performed was his 1999 hit single "You Won't Ever Be Lonely", "I'll Go Crazy", and "She's More."

After an hour of singing, dancing, clapping, and smiling the show came to an end and the band left the stage. People were starting to leave when Griggs came back out on stage to give one, last, memorable song that most true Southerners know by heart, "Sweet Home Alabama."

Just Like in the Movies

Homecoming 2000

There must have been something in the air. Students were revving up for the last Homecoming of the millennium. Spirits were soaring as TSU students began preparing for the week of Homecoming. The theme set the tone for the entire week. Just like in the movies, students were filled with school pride. Just like in the movies, people were coming together to support our team. And just like in the movies, Troy State was victorious.

The adventure began with Skit Night. Students donned outfits they wouldn't be caught dead wearing and became actors for one night. Monday night became a musical dedicated to swing, as students participated in the Dance-a-thon. Mystery night was next as students became involved in a mystery game. Wednesday night gave TSU students a chance to display their singing abilities with Karaoke night. Pumped-up students cheered on the football team at the pep rally Thursday night. And the Homecoming Queen and her court enjoyed a luncheon Friday.

Overall winners for the week in the sorority division were: Phi Mu, first place; Alpha Gamma Delta, second place; and Alpha Delta Pi, third place. For the fraternities, FarmHouse finished first, Sigma Chi finished second and Pi Kappa Phi finished third. The Sound of the South won first place, Baptist Campus Ministries won second and Freshman Forum won third place in the organizations division.

All students, faculty, and staff that participated came together to make Homecoming 2000 Oscar-worthy.

The Queen and her Court

It all started with a large group of young women that was narrowed down to five. From there, one would be chosen as Troy State's Homecoming Queen 2000. Many would say this is an honor like no other because the student body selects the queen and her court. The title was also made a bit more magical since she would be the last queen of the millennium.

This year's Homecoming Queen was Delta Catching. She was an at-large representative. Catching was not the only lovely woman to take center stage. Four other girls were chosen to represent TSU as the Homecoming Court. Temika Avant, sponsored by Alpha Kappa Alpha; Vanessa Brown, sponsored the Sound of the South; Heather Hines, sponsored by Sigma Chi; and Amy Philips-Redclift, sponsored by Farmhouse, were picked from among 40 other beautiful women.

The Sound

Troy State University has become a regular stop for musicians. Trisha Yearwood, Rhett Atkins, Vertical Horizon, Angry Salad, Allure and the Dennis Edwards' Temptations Revue have all performed at Troy State in the past. This year was not an exception.

Country music star Lee Greenwood helped Troy State celebrate Veterans Day. Greenwood appeared with the Sound of the South during the TSU vs. McNeese State halftime. The halftime show was a salute to veterans. The Sound of the South kicked off the show with "The George M. Cohan Swing" and then Bruce Springsteen's hit "Born in the USA." Greenwood then performed his signature hit "God Bless the USA." Greenwood also performed a postgame concert.

Greenwood is credited with 18 albums, with three achieving "gold" status. He was named the 1985 Country Music Association Male Vocalist of the Year, and also won CMA Song of the Year honors for writing "God Bless the USA." Greenwood still performs regularly at The Lee Greenwood Theater in Sevierville, Tenn.

of Music

Lee Greenwood was not the only artist to perform at a football game. Singer/song writer Brian McKnight was a highlight to the TSU vs. Appalachian State playoff game. McKnight performed "The Star Spangled Banner" during pregame festivities.

McKnight's works include three bestselling albums. He is also known for his 1998 double-platinum album "Anytime," which earned two Grammy nominations. The album also was nominated for an American Music Award, MTV Music Award, Image Award and Blockbuster Award. "Anytime" also earned McKnight a Soul Train Award for Best male Singer. His album "Back at One" was also a smash hit. McKnight has produced tracks for Boyz II Men and recorded the duet "Love Is" with Vanessa Williams. He has also produced artists like Take 6, Chico DeBarge and Xscape. McKnight has also worked with Mariah Carey on the single "Whenever You Call." He also has a recording, "Win," that can be heard on the soundtrack of the movie "Men of Honor."

Bringing in the Funk

Many organizations express their pride through stepping. Stepping is a combination of traditional African dance, military marching, and hip-hop music. It gives fraternities, sororities and organizations a chance to express their devotion to the group. Stepping has become popular among college campus as a form of entertainment.

Troy State's SGA-sponsored the annual Black History Step Show on Feb. 7, 2001. Every organization that participated gave their all. The sorority Alpha Kappa Alpha stepped away with first place. The brothers of Alpha Phi Alpha took second and Zeta Phi Beta won third. The fraternity Phi Beta Sigma also participated.

Mission Impossible: The Quest for the Crown

The theme for this year's Miss TSU pageant said it all. A group of young women went through countless hours of rehearsal and preparation for the ultimate goal for them: to be crowned Miss TSU. They knew that if they accepted this mission it would be exhausting but the result would be worth it. Although only one person can walk away with the crown, many participants said it was a great experience to just spend time with other young women and develop new friendships. To many, that was the ultimate goal.

The contestants were judged on different things from poise to talent to stage presence. They all went through an interview process. There was also a swimsuit competition, talent competition and evening gown competition over the course of the two days.

And the Winners Are...

To many women, being chosen as Miss TSU is a dream come true. This dream came true for sophomore Kelly Hawkins as she was crowned Miss TSU at the 30th annual pageant. Hawkins performed a classical ballet en pointe to a selection from the musical "Rodeo." Her platform was child abuse and awareness prevention. Hawkins plans to use the title to raise awareness about child abuse and raise money for Prevent Child Abuse America.

First runner-up for the pageant was Christy Bedingfield. Bedingfield also won the talent competition with her performance of the operatic selection "O Mio Babbino Caro." Second runner-up was Andrea Domizio, who also won the swimsuit competition. Melissa McCord was third runner-up and Whitley Porter was fourth runner-up.

Top eight finalists included Autumn McGill, Holly Peters, and Christa Livingston.

The Luck of the Irish

Troy State began to see many different shades of green as St. Patrick's Day approached. The university and the city of Troy celebrated the holiday with a week of festivities geared toward the day. There were guest speakers, performances by the band, pageants, a talent show, a cooking contest and a parade to top it all off. Students were encouraged to participate on days like "Green and Jeans" day, where all faculty, staff and students were to wear green shirts and jeans. Even Frank's Place turned into an Irish Pub. Irish tunes were heard around campus as people gathered to sing or play those songs familiar to Ireland. People had the chance to cut loose all while learning some about the Irish heritage.

Lucky Charms

Who needs lucky charms when you have a great smile? The first annual St. Patrick's Day Celebration week was held March 12-17. The theme of the festive week was "Beat the Proration Blues with Irish Green." Among the week's activities the Miss Shamrock and Mr. Leprechaun Pageant took place on March 13th in the Crosby Theater.

The women were judged on their appearance in their evening gowns on the stage. The top 10 finalists had to answer an on stage question relating to St. Patrick's Day.

The women were not the only ones who had a chance to show off their "beauty." Troy State men were allowed to compete for the title of Mister Leprechaun. They were judged on their leprechaun costumes and their best leprechaun impression. The pageant served as a fun sort of twist to the usual serious type of pageant.

A Pot of Golden Talent

Troy State University is a melting pot of many different talents. Students had the chance to show off their talents at the St. Patrick's Week Talent Show. The SGA-sponsored show featured acts ranging from singing to skits to playing a musical instrument. Around $130 in donations were taken at the door. All donations were given to the March of Dimes.

There were 17 acts overall. Each participant was judged on three things: appearance, talent and overall. They were given a rate of 1 to 10. Dan Howard took first place with his performance on a drum set. Second place went to Barry Miller for his singing talent. Third place was a tie between Tommi Lombardo and Georgia Mallory, who both sang.

Hilary West from SGA said that there was a great turnout and a lot of talent. She also said that SGA was excited about how well the talent show went.

Dan Howard wowed the judges and the crowd with his drum playing skills.

Jeff Knight amazed everyone as he played "Amazed" by Lonestar.

SPRING IS IN THE AIR

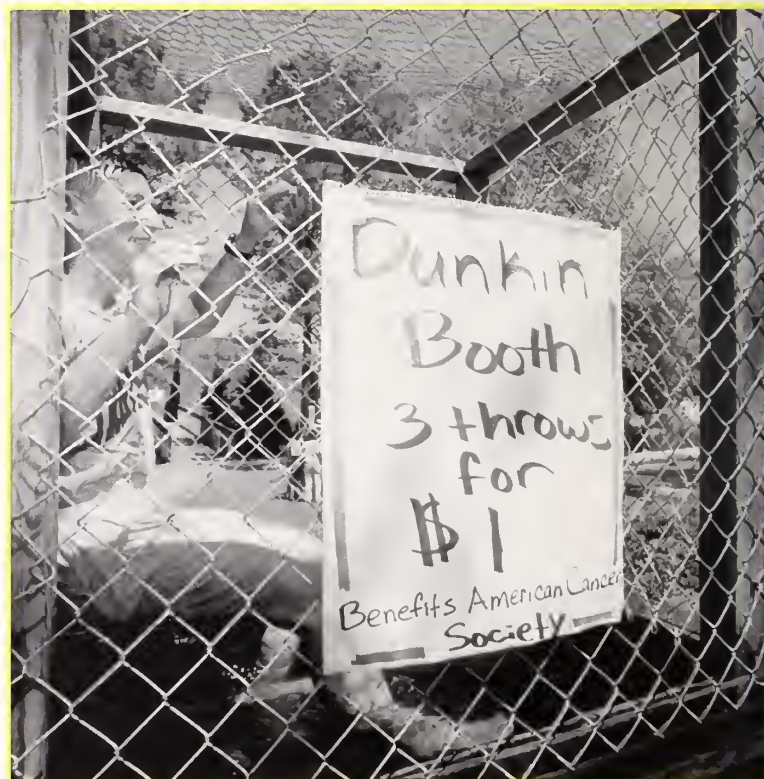

People of all ages came out to enjoy the Spring Fling festivities. Students, faculty and staff took a few moments out of their day to relax and cut loose behind the Adams Center.

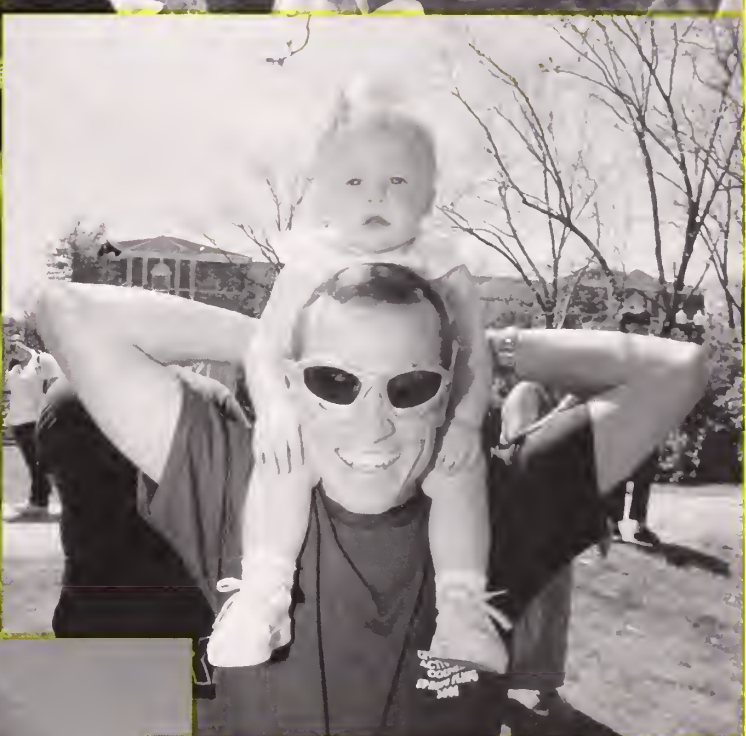

There were plenty of activities to take part in. For the adventurous, there were the obstacle course and the human bowling ball. For the athletic, there was the dunking booth. And for the hungry, there were free sno-cones and hot dogs. Music filled the air for everyone taking part in Spring Fling and even for those just "passing through." No more cold, wintry nights for Troy Spring arrived with summer just around the corner.

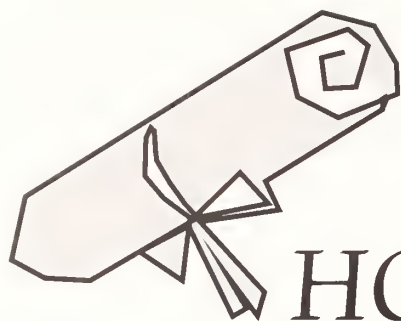

Clint Carlson prepared to kiss a goat to help raise money for the American Cancer Society.

HONORS CONVOCATION

On April 23, 2001, more than 40 students were recognized for their achievement in maintaining academic excellence. The annual Honors Convocation was held in the Claudia Crosby Theater. Not only were students recognized, but also outstanding faculty shared the limelight. Dr. Wayne Flynt was the guest speaker at the honorable ceremony. The Honors Convocation served as a look back on the outstanding achievements of students and faculty and as an encouragement to keep striving for excellence.

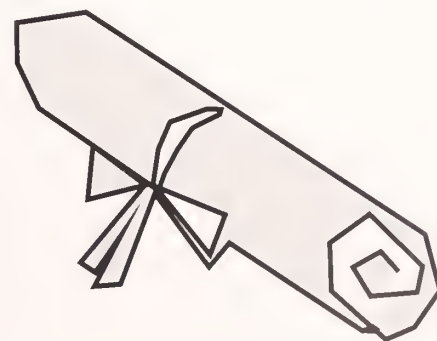

Dr. Allen Dennis, a history professor, is awarded the Ingalls award for Excellence in Classroom Teaching. He was also awarded the faculty Algernon Sydney Sullivan award.

Dr. Wayne Flynt served as the keynote speaker for the TSU Honors convocation. Dr. Flynt is an award-winning author and an expert on Southern history.

Matthew Hudnall is awarded the Algernon Sydney Sullivan award for his outstanding academic and civic achievements.

Looking Back

As the end of another school year neared, many Troy State students, faculty and staff began to look back. There were many events that brought Troy State together from football games to anti-proration rallies. All these events reminded Troy State why the college is so special: a sense of togetherness.

During the year, students were welcomed back to a new and different look to SAGA. Troy State also had a chance to slap some boots on and get down as country music artist Andy Griggs performed. The fall semester also had Troy State celebrating the last homecoming of the millennium. Recording artists Lee Greenwood and Brian McKnight helped keep some Trojan spirit alive while performing during football games.

As the spring semester started off, TSU celebrated Black History Month with a variety of events, including the Annual Black History Month Step Show. A new Miss TSU was crowned and for the first time in the school's history, a Miss Shamrock and Mister Leprechaun were also crowned. Troy State celebrated St. Patrick's Day with a week full of events. And as the semester came to a close, TSU was given a chance to relax and have fun at the annual spring fling.

During the 2000-01 school year, Troy State became very aware of politics. Early in the fall semester a small group of students raised awareness among the campus about much needed changes to the Alabama constitution. During the spring, TSU students, faculty, and staff came together to fight proration. Troy State became very outspoken on the thought of drastic cuts to higher education. The TSU family visited the steps of the capital in Montgomery twice to voice their opinions about proration.

Overall 2000-01 was a very busy and exciting year. While some students began to prepare for the "real world" and others for the summer vacation, one can only hope that 2001-02 can only be as great as this year was.

Always a crowd favorite, T-Roy, with his driver, Corey Sisco, waves as they make their way down University Avenue during the St. Patrick's Day Parade.

The Student Government Association gave students a chance to become a part of the election. They held a debate so that students could have the chance to ask those running why they should be elected. The debate gave candidates like Bart Boothe (left) and Katy Peel (right), who were running for SGA president, a chance to express their opinions on many issues within Troy State.

With Memories

Country music recording artist Andy Griggs stopped by to entertain TSU with a concert during fall semester. Griggs performed some of his popular songs, some gospel tunes with his family, and his version of the classic Sweet Home Alabama.

Troy State's international students brought a bit of their culture to TSU during the ISCO festival. Students entertained the crowd with different songs, dances and performances from their country. Chancellor Jack Hawkins Jr. looks over the many different ethnic foods before deciding what to try.

Palladium

The Palladium, Troy State's yearbook, had to make a few adjustments to make this year. The staff went from drawing everything out on paper to doing everything on computer. The staff worked to meet deadlines, despite the changes. The staff changed photographers and editors between semesters. Mike Thompson replaced Hillary Browder as photographer. Jami Wilks who served as editor last year and half of this year passed her responsibilities on to Justin Rogers and Kris-Ann McDaniel. Advised by Mr. Rick Kenney, the staff worked together to produce the publication. Every Wednesday night, the at 5:30, the staff gathered together to figure out ways to create a fine publication.

Farewell To 1-AA

The Troy State University football team bid adieu to Division I-AA football in the year 2000. Troy has been a powerhouse in I-AA for many years now and decided to make the jump to I-A football in 2001. With one final season left in I-AA the Trojans made one last push for the national championship. The team did not reach its ultimate goal but did finish with a nine-win season and was even ranked No. 1 in the nation at one point and won a second straight conference championship.

Maestri's Maniacs

The Trojans entered the 2000-01 season as the defending TAAC champions and with high hopes to repeat. The season got off to a rough start in the month of December, but after the Christmas break the Trojans showed why they were the defending conference champions. They fell just short of a second straight TAAC title and just short of the NCAA tournament losing to Georgia State in the conference tournament championship game.

Lady Hoopsters

The Lady Trojan Basketball team had a very respectable season this past year. They finished with a 15-14 overall record and finished the conference season with a five hundred record at 9-9. With only two seniors being lost to graduation and a leading scorer who was freshman the Lady Trojans are looking forward to building on this past season. With a lot of experience from this past season the conference championship should be within their grasps in the 2001-02 season.

Around The Horn

TSU

The Trojans finished the 2001 season with a disappointing record. They recorded only 26 wins to go along with 28 losses. The season was full of highs and lows, with one major bright spot being the arm of senior pitcher Jason Bernard, who won 11 games and threw 10 complete games. He was named second team All-Conference as well. Freshman Wade Miller was also named to the All-Freshman team for the conference.

Put Me In Coach

This was supposed to be the first season in the Lady Trojan softball team's new home facility. Well they did play on a new field, just not the one they had planned on. This season all home games were played at the Troy city Sportsplex. After this season they may not want to leave there. They finished the regular season with a 35-21 record with wins over top programs such as Florida State, Georgia Tech, and Auburn. With the new complex next season and many key returnees the Trojans will be looking to improve on their 7-7 TAAC record and compete for the conference championship.

The Troy State University Women's soccer team began its fourth season of play this year. Coming off its best season ever last year the team was looking to improve on that record. The Troy State University volleyball team had a very exciting season finishing with a 20-win season, 10 more wins than they had in 1999. Two of the newcomers had a big impact on the team this year. Haven Triboulet and Rachel Hassan were named to the TAAC All-Freshman team and senior Emily Larson was named second-team all-conference. The core of this team is very young so the future of TSU volleyball looks very strong.

On Your Mark

The Troy State University women's track team completed another successful year this past season. It finished third overall in the TAAC. The team was very young and had a lot of key contributors. The experience gained during this past year will be a major advantage for the Trojans in the future. With the help and guidance of the 1999 women's coach of the year Bob Lambert, the Trojans will once again compete for the TAAC title.

Behind the strength of seven individual titles, the Troy State men's track and field team captured its third TAAC title in the past four years. The conference championships took place on April 20-21 in Orlando, Fla. Senior distance runner Michael Green led the way for the Trojans, winning the 5,000 and 10,000 meters races. At the conclusion of the meet Coach Bob Lambert was named the men's coach of the year.

Letter from Chancellor Jack Hawkins Jr.

The 2000-01 year at Troy State University saw a continuation of the program that has marked the campus over the past decade. The year will also be remembered as a time when the entire TSU community joined in common cause to strive for permanent reform for higher education.

Students, alumni, friends, faculty and staff united to protest further attempts to cut higher education's already limited state funding. While the circumstances that brought about the need for the response were disheartening, the reaction by our Troy State University family was uplifting. Specifically, the leaders in our student body proved they are qualified to lead the pursuit of excellence in Alabama for decades to come.

The 2000-01 year also saw new athletic facility construction in the form of a new softball field and new tennis courts. This project is designed not only to enhance our growing women's intercollegiate athletics program, but also to provide first-rate facilities for our students and members of the entire community to enjoy. The year also marked TSU's farewell season in Division I-AA football, coupled with the realization that the Trojans will now compete on a national stage in NCAA's Division I-A.

Other significant changes were not as noticeable, but were nonetheless important. New courses and disciplines were developed, as TSU continues its role as an academic innovator. Also transparent to most students was the development of a five-year strategic plan that will chart TSU's continued path of growth. This new plan will ensure that future generations of Trojans will continue to love their university, because this new plan will make the needs of our students our first priority.

Sincerely,
Jack Hawkins Jr., Ph.D.

Chancellor
Hawkins and his family: wife,
Janice Hawkins;
daughters Kelly
and Katie
Hawkins, at Miss

2001 Palladium

Troy State University Yearbook

Colophon

The 90th volume of the Troy State University Palladium was produced by a staff of 14, seven of whom were returning members. Palladium pre-orders are taken starting on homecoming of every year. No portion of this book may not reproduced without the written consent of the Troy State University Student Publications Board. The views reflected in the Palladium do not necessarily represent the views of Troy State University.

PRODUCTION:

The 2001 Palladium consists of 288 pages that were designed on Adobe Page Maker 6.5 and Adobe Photoshop 4.0 on five Apple Macintosh computers. The pages were then sent on CDs to Herff Jones Yearbooks in Montgomery, Ala.

COVER:

The cover was designed by the staff. The base material used was Matte Black with a black applied color, crush grain and a die cut with the endsheets showing through. The spine showing the title and date is in a blind emboss.

TYPE:

On the endsheet the theme was printed in Optima. Headlines throughout the book varied from section to section. Body copy is in 11pt Geneva, are 10pt Optium Black and the folios are in reverse print 24pt Times. The Opening and Closing spreads are in Optium. The folio, opening, closing, and divider pages were designed by the coeditors and business manager.

PHOTOGRAPHY:

The majority of the pictures were scanned into Adobe Photoshop. The dividers, opening, closing, and endsheet pictures were taken by Michael Thompson. The group shots and other pictures were taken by Palladium photographers Michael Thompson and Hilary Browder.

Some pictures in Campus Life were contributed by Shannon Cunningham. Pictures were also taken by Tropolitan photographer Griffin Pritchard. Pictures were also contributed by Mr. Donald Norsworthy. The individual mug shots in the Greek, People, and Academic sections were taken by Cecil de Monbrun from Jim Owen Photography. Also, fraternities, sororities, and organizations gave pictures for there pages.

ADVERTISEMENTS:

Most of the local ads were sold by the Palladium business manager, Kristen Nelson.

BUDGET:

The 2001 Palladium was produced at a cost of about $60,000. Expenses were paid by student activity fees, yearbook purchases and pages sold to greeks and organizations.
